European Tapestries

Tapestry is a beautiful piece of fabric woven in cotton or yarn and depicting beautiful landscapes, flowers, nautical scenes, animals and wild life, coastal scenes and sea beaches, romance, common man, life styles, social gathering, myth, historic events and works of legendary artists. Tapestry is used as wall hangings, throws, table covers and cushions for decorating the home and office. Tapestries have a long and rich history. It is believed that tapestry has been used by people since the Hellenistic period.

Later, it was in the 13th and 14th century AD in Europe that tapestries were widely produced and used by people. France, Germany, Belgium and the Netherlands were the centre of tapestry production. Kings, nobles and clergies used tapestries for decorating their palaces and churches. Now tapestry is produced all over the world. There are various types of tapestries such as Medieval, Belgian, Unicorn, Oriental, modern and European tapestries. Now people of all cultures use tapestry for decorating their homes, gardens and offices. Tapestry enhances the beauty of the interior of a home.

European tapestries are known for their splendid craftsmanship. They are wonderful in design and colours. Though they are traditional, they look elegant and sophisticated. Based on the art and culture of the past, European tapestries carry different designs with various themes. Some of the works of famous artists like Da Vinci and Vincent Van Gogh also form the basis of European tapestries. Works of legendary artists like Van Gogh and Claude Monte are also favorite themes of modern European tapestry. Europe was the centre of tapestry production in the 14th and 15th centuries AD.

Now the original designs and colors of European tapestry are much in demand worldwide. Belgium tapestries including the Bayeux and Beatrix tapestries are most the preferred among European tapestries. Belgian tapestries depict historic events like the Battle of Hastings, William the conqueror and Duke of Normandy. Beatrix tapestries are generally designed with nautical and romantic scenes. These tapestries are artistic. Wonderful in design and creativity, Belgian tapestries depict the rich history of the mediaeval era. There are tapestries based on the works of artists like Raphael, Verdure, François Boucher, Aubusson, Bayeux and William Morris.

European tapestries are called so because the designs and patterns woven into them are of European origin. France, Germany, Belgium are the places where this art grew, bloomed, flourished and it is still evolving to this very day. One can still see the famous French art pieces neatly weaved into each of the European tapestries. In fact, Belgium tapestries are much loved by people who are gifted with the taste for art. One can find Belgian tapestries in wall hangings tapestries and cushions or bolster tapestries. Designs in the French tapestries of the 13th and 14th centuries resemble the manuscript paintings of the Gothic period. Figures of people were flat silhouettes, and backgrounds were simplified. In the 15th century, the art of tapestry weaving spread from France to other European Countries.

European tapestries were ubiquitous in the castles and churches of the late medieval and Renaissance eras. At a practical level, they provided a form of insulation and decoration that could be easily transported. In addition, the process of tapestry weaving, where every stitch is placed by hand, enabled the creation of complex figurative images on an enormous scale. Many European tapestries measure as much as 5 x 10 yards and sets could include ten or more pieces. While much of the production was relatively coarse, intended for decorative purposes, wealthy patrons could commission designs whose subjects embodied celebratory or propagandistic themes. Enriched with silk and gilt metallic thread, such tapestries were central components of the ostentatious magnificence used by powerful secular and religious rulers to broadcast their wealth and might.
